Greetings Eric,

Did the Philadelphia Mint strike some of the Chinese Republic Sun Yat-sen / Junk $$$ during WW II??? If I recall correctly it was for military payments of some sort.

Ever locate any of the British campaign medals?

Best wishes,

Hello Colin!

Hope things are fine there!

What do you think of this coin? It seems the countermark is good, but I know very little about the John Burger's countermarks.

What do you think of that essay on the dutch obsidional silver coins I sent you?

All the best,

Dear Colin: There is a scarce book written on English on countermarks on gold coins. The man who was another expert on those matters died about a year or so ago. He had a large collection of couterstamped pieces. I forgot his name but he was a good friend. He lived in Puerto Rico and was on the Council or Board of Trustees of ANS. I have the above mentioned book in my library and will gladly lend it to you if my curator can find it. I am unfamiliar with the initials counterstamped on the reverse. It is very important to see if the two counterstamps line up perfectly in case the coin is a cast. It is wonderful in appearance. I have a Burger counterstamp on one adjusted coin I think. It is always nice to hear from you. Eric

God morning Eric,

For some reason the notation of your e-address just surfaced by the keyboard so I might as well say hello.

Have been helping out John Mussell at Token Pub in the UK with their military medal year book doing a little polishing here and there but got off to a bad start with the olde codgers in the mini medal branch.....whoops, I'm an olde codger now so I can joust with these steedless knights of yesteryear on even ground as I also am a knight.

Best wishes

Ah, Juan Fino Compadre

For crying out loud.....you only get one neck to hold up your head, get hung with, chopped off by the guillotine or break.

What the heck were you trying to do? Beat the odds?????

As for a rubber neck Kandy and I will gladly send you a rubber ducky.

Just seen Russ Rulau at the Iola Post Office and he is aging quickly.....of course he has outlived what his doctor estimated for longevity.

Beats me why I am still enjoying getting dee-crepid....outlived my real parents by decades going on 71 this 16th de Septiembre. When is maturity going to happen to me? My oldest son was born in El Paso on Cinco de Mayo.....guess we have Mehicano roots somewhere...as they celebrate both our birthdays there...except in Juarez of course...where the funeral parlors are working 24/7.

Well our very best wishes for a great recovery.....and keep in touch for a bit of humor when needed..or not.

Greetings Eric,

I have a local friend that collects this early vignette on most any type of paperamania in case you may have an odd piece or pieces that could be let go.

How are you? Ready and able to watch some tennis matches???? I hope so.

We had a cool but not bad winter so far as only one snow storm hit us early on. Now the ice here and there as snow melts makes for being a bit more careful.

Best wishes,

Colin

Rolling on the floor laughing Be right back

When Cliff made me an ANS Lifer I accepted but more as a critic to an anti commercial Numis org....but that has certainly changed over the years.....

The latest Journal arrived and I was thrilled beyond.....when I read the article about you.....superb indeed!!

Of course in reading thru the journal I found some bits of humor:

page # 52 - the reverse mint side of the Chinese cash is upside down !!!

page # 62 - in mentioning "the Mexican dollar (8 reales)" as "the only silver coins that actually circulated in the colonies" in the review....which should have explained more clearly.....oh my good griffles.....we know them as Spanish Colonial reales from various mints besides Mexico City and if they would read some of the counterfeit detectors which actually illustrated various other foreign coins with valuations compared to our dollar they might learn something new..I even noticed the listing of a small Potosi Mint proc...maybe a course at ANS HQ covering the young USA alternate foreign coinages is needed including the law that ended circulation of foreign coinages here.

Oh well.....

Best wishes,

Colin

P.S. The Ohio based owners/corporate raiders have reduced the KP staff to well under 100 employees !!

Dear Colijn:

Thank you for noticing and commenting upon the ANS blast as to my scribbling. If the Chinese coin is imaged upside down turn the magazine 180 degrees This conforms to what in the English language reads from right to left instead of from left to right (I assume you already know that). Eric
